Take advantage of new species in New England waters

with
Jimmy Fee

Jimmy is the assistant editor and a longtime columnist at On The Water magazine. Extremely knowledgeable, Jimmy's articles always provide a mix of technical information and general fishing insights. This makes him a must-read that both entertains and educates anglers.

Jimmy is mostly known as a top surf fisherman, although he'll fish from boat as well. He's an all-around angler who fishing both fresh and salt water and has fished around the world.

SEMINAR INFO: Warming ocean waters has caused a shift in fish populations. Everyone now knows that species like black sea bass, scup and summer flounder have been shifting northward.

Fish like king mackerel and triggerfish used to be occasional visitors to are area, but are now consistently seen in New England.

In this seminar Jimmy will talk about the changing fishing opportunities that warmer waters have brought to our area and how to take advantage of this and fish for them.
