Great White Sharks Don't Want to Eat Us!

Grace Kelly

In her September 2020 article, "Complicated Relationships Entwined to Produce Shark Attacks," Grace wrote about the complex ecosystem that produces shark attacks, including a resurgence in once decimated seal populations, climate change, and human access to coastal waters.

In this seminar, she will go through her own perceptions of sharks before writing the article, talk a little bit about shark behavior, and dive into the fascinating relationship between humans, seals and sharks.

Grace said she is "by no means an expert," but she has collected information from a variety of sources on shark, seal, and even human behavior, and will present her findings.

About Grace: With a diverse background in magazine journalism, newspaper reporting and food media, Grace enjoy exploring the intersections of food, nature, human behavior and memory.

She has written award-winning articles on a variety of topics, including stigmatized medicines and a soccer program for underprivileged youth, and currently works as an assistant editor on the reviews team at America's Test Kitchen.

Test kitchen? Yes! In last months issue we printed Grace's "Rhode Island Stuffies" recipe!
She's a woman of many talents.

When she's not in the kitchen or reading cookbooks, you'll find her researching local food traditions, foraging for mushrooms, or climbing at her local rock gym.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

Due to COVID restrictions we will not be able to conduct an in-person meeting.
